AT THE UTAH PRISON.

Interesting Programme Carried Out in the Penitentiary.

Although the inmates of the State prison are not allowed to join the thousands of free men and women in strewing flowers upon the graves of departed relatives, if any they have in Utah, Decoration day did not pass without the inmates of the big house on the hill. At 10 o'clock Miss Nora Gleason, Miss Lottie Owen, Miss Kathleen Fitzpatrick, Miss Corinne Harris, Miss Bachman, Edward Fitzpatrick, Louis Haislet and Amos Langton went to the penitentiary and gave a very interesting programme in the chapel. The numbers included selections appropriate to the day, interspersed with monologues and comic songs by Amos Langton and patriotic songs in which the inmates joined heartily. The entertainment was given under the direction of Miss Nora Gleason and was a pleasing diversion for the inmates of the prison—Salt Lake Tribune.

ODEN NOTES.

LARGEST CLASS ON RECORD.

Right Rev. Bishop Scanlan Administers Confirmation at St. Joseph's Church.

Fitting it was that the month of May which was rendered sacred to so many by our Blessed Lord's first visit to the pure virgin should also be sealed the graces received by "enduring them with power from on high," to equip and fortify them for the spiritual combat of life. It was with deep gratification that Right Rev. Bishop Scanlan imparted the sacrament of strengthening grace to the largest class he had yet confirmed and deeply imposing were the solemn ceremonies.

When Reverend Father Cushman had finished the Holy Sacrifice, Right Reverend Bishop Scanlan, dressed in altar and in his own forcible style, addressed the present. Long shall his words ring not only in the hearts of the kneeling, but also in those of every earnest listener in the hushed congregation. The bishop opened his sermon by reading the epistle for Sunday.

Appropriate to the occasion, and as his deep voice gave utterance to the words of Divine Wisdom, "Be ye doers of the word," he exhorted by mail to "endure," every one present inactively, felt that he was merely formulating the principle by which his own life has been ruled until he stands forth as an embodiment of the spiritual action, the epistle enforced.

With all the eloquence that springs from conviction, the bishop set forth the sublime beauty, modeling the words of St. James, dwelling largely on the self-deception of any one who deems himself religious yet bridges not his tongue, and extolling in unmeasured terms the glory of the Christian life, the fulfillment of the law, Religion must be clean from top to bottom, so that no one either within or without the fold may be scandalized, for we are bound to edify those with us as well as those without. We have to sustain a high standard of morality, our own good goes back to the source of all good, and the source of all evil, the source of all suffering. The evils we see around us are the work of sin. Orphan asylums, workhouses, reform schools are the effects of sin. The hearts of all the force of noble, sublime, and heroic action.

The bishop gave expression to the joy he felt at the large number, thirty-four, who had that morning enrolled themselves as soldiers of Christ. He said that anyone who twenty years before would have prophesied such a future for Ogden's Catholicity would have been a daring prophet, but that it is evident that God's blessing rests on the congregation, and it could not bring forth such fruits.

Reverend Hugh Cumiskey, the vicar general of the diocese, assisted Reverend Father Cushman in waiting on the bishop.

The May Procession.

Who but the Mother of Fair Love could have been the inspiration of a scene so beautiful as that beheld last Sunday night by the residents of Ogden and the surrounding country, as they gathered in St. Joseph's church to view the traditional May procession? For more than a score of years it has been the custom here to hold a May procession, the month dedicated to Mary, home and show by external marks of devotion, the fidelity and love of her children and the bow of her office consecrated to her under the enviable title of Children of Mary.

Nature seemed, on this occasion, to have done her choicest work, as if to rival the sweet modesty of the fair maidens who graced the rank of sodalists. Bird and blossom, leaf and sunset, the orchestra of praise that reached beyond the stars, all seemed to where the "crowned queen of creation" received the loving homage of her youthful votaries.

At seven p. m. about one hundred and eighty young ladies and children, in snowy robes and lace-like veils, formed in rank at Sacred Heart Academy and proceeded to the church. Could an artist of brush or pen paint the picture formed by the grand old mountains, surely in the gallery of the world there is no more beautiful sketch than that which the eye beheld on that night. The procession was the matchless sky was the fair banner which headed the procession with its life-like emblems many times reflected in the pure white robes of all, until they reached the church entrance. There, within the sanctuary, the chaste statue of her whom their hearts would honor, a crown of lights and crowned with a star of the same radiant brilliancy.

After making a circuit of the aisles, the sodalists arranged themselves in the pews while the organ played a dirge. Misses B. McCarthy and K. Keck advanced to crown their Queen and Mother of the dear old May hymn, "we crown thee with flowers and prayers," they placed the immaculate blossoms on the brow of her who symbolizes "our tainted nature's solitary blot." Our sainted nature's solitary blot.

Then the reverend pastor, P. M. Cushman, explained to those assembled the deep significance of the ceremony, referring the sodalists to the times made by those who do not understand Catholic devotion to the Mother of God. He proved by natural conclusions that the Mother of God was the one who had been honored by her whom God Himself deigned to honor, giving tribute to earth an endless May.

PROVINCIAL OF THE MARIST ORDER IN SALT LAKE.

The Rev. Father Descreux, provincial of the Marist order of the Catholic priesthood, head of that organization in the United States and a part of Mexico and Canada, is in the city the guest of Father Gahan, at All Hallows college.

Father Descreux's field includes all of the territory of the United States, which the Marist fathers work, as well as five foundations in Mexico and one in Canada. His mission here at this time is to inspect All Hallows college, which is conducted by the Marist fathers, and to suggest, after his return to his headquarters in Washington, D. C., any changes or improvements he may deem it expedient to make for the good of the organization here or elsewhere.

Father Descreux visits each Marist house once a year to inspect its status, condition, progress and advancement of the houses, and to make suggestions for their improvement. The work of the order is the educating of young men and their preparation for the priesthood, or for holy orders. Father Descreux has erected a college in Washington a splendid college for the education of young boys desiring to study for the priesthood. The boys in this college are selected from different parts of the country, and are sent to Washington to make their first preliminary steps. Afterward they study for the ecclesiastical state.

Father Descreux is well pleased with the showing made by All Hallows college, its general progress and the character of work that is being carried on here. He has not suggested that any changes be made in the personnel of the faculty. Any suggestions that he may deem advisable to make or any changes that will be effected will be announced after his return to Washington at the end of the year.

Obituary.

KAY.
The sympathy of many friends is extended to Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kay in their grief over the death of their infant son. The little one was a bold, sweet, winsome baby, and his death has made the happy home desolate. May God comfort the mourning parents
